EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In 2025, our collective efforts helped to reshape Kentucky's food system by supporting family farms, expanding access to locally grown food, and strengthening the market and policy systems that sustain Kentucky agriculture. Working at the intersection of agricultural economic development, food access, and public health, CFA ensures that investments in local agriculture generate lasting benefits for farmers and communities alike.

In 2025, CFA programs generated $890,988 in direct farm sales, resulting in an estimated $1,487,950 in total economic impact statewide. By leveraging public and private funding alongside local market investments, CFA expanded nutrition incentive programs, strengthened farmers markets, and increased reliable revenue opportunities for Kentucky producers while improving food access for families across the Commonwealth.

BUILDING HEALTHY FOOD ACCESS & FARMER INCOME

KENTUCKY DOUBLE DOLLARS & FRESH RX

Community Farm Alliance's nutrition incentive programs strengthen Kentucky farms while expanding access to fresh, locally grown food for families across the Commonwealth. By connecting federal nutrition benefits and healthcare partnerships directly with farmers and markets, CFA ensures that food access investments also support local agricultural economies.

In 2025, Kentucky Double Dollars (KDD) and Fresh Rx (FRx) generated more than $871,504 in direct farm sales, helping stabilize income for small and mid-sized producers while increasing purchasing power for households facing rising food costs. These programs create consistent customer demand at farmers markets, retail locations, and community sites, allowing farmers to plan production, diversify offerings, and grow sustainable businesses.

CFA continues to expand market opportunities through partnerships with grocery retailers, healthcare providers, and community organizations to keep food dollars circulating locally—supporting farm viability while improving community health outcomes across Kentucky.

STRENGTHENING LOCAL MARKETS & FUTURE FARMERS

FARMERS MARKET SUPPORT & FARM TO SCHOOL

Strong local food systems depend on stable markets and meaningful opportunities for communities to connect with agriculture. Community Farm Alliance supports both by strengthening farmers markets—the primary sales outlet for many small farms—while helping students and schools build lasting relationships with local food and farming.

In 2025, CFA's Farmers Market Support Program provided individualized technical assistance to markets across Kentucky, helping market managers and vendors improve operations, expand SNAP and nutrition incentive participation, and strengthen leadership capacity. These efforts help ensure farmers markets remain reliable, profitable outlets where farmers can grow their businesses and communities can access fresh food.

At the same time, CFA's Farm to School Network connected thousands of Kentucky students with agriculture through hands-on learning, school gardens, and farm engagement activities. By introducing young people to where food comes from and supporting local procurement efforts, Farm to School initiatives help cultivate the next generation of farmers, consumers, and community leaders.

BUILDING POLICY & SYSTEMS THAT SUPPORT FARMERS

ADVOCACY, EDUCATION, & STATEWIDE COLLABORATION

Community Farm Alliance works to ensure that Kentucky farmers and communities have a voice in shaping the policies and systems that influence agriculture, food access, and rural economies. Through farmer-led advocacy, policy education, and statewide collaboration, CFA connects on-the-ground experience with decision-makers to advance practical solutions that support local farms and healthy communities.

In 2025, CFA facilitated direct engagement between farmers and policymakers at both the state and federal levels, strengthened grassroots leadership through policy education, and advanced cross-sector collaboration linking agriculture and healthcare. These efforts position CFA not only as a program implementer, but as a trusted statewide leader in food and farm systems change.

CFA also contributed to cross-sector collaboration through the Kentucky Food Action Network and statewide Food as Medicine initiatives, bringing together healthcare providers, food system partners, and community leaders to align strategies that improve both farm viability and community health.
